

Before- and After-School Programs

When choosing before- or after-school programs, one of the key factors for parents to consider is whether the program is licensed or license-exempt. California's Department of Social Services operates the Community Care Licensing Division; this program licenses and monitors family child care homes and child care centers in order to meet a minimum standard of a healthy and safe environment for children. Certain license-exempt programs choose to meet the same standards as licensed programs. It is parental responsibility to determine which safety, health and quality criteria are important to your child and whether the program you are considering meets those needs.

The following are highlights of Community Care Licensing regulations that licensed facilities must meet:

- Criminal record clearances are required for all program staff from California Department of Justice before they can work at the facility; FBI and Child Abuse Index clearances are also required.
- Fire clearance is mandatory. Inspection by local fire jurisdiction determines that the facility meets all current fire safety requirements.
- Capacity determinations are based upon square footage of facility, outdoor space, and number of restrooms.
- Compliance visits and complaint investigations are conducted by Community Care Licensing.
- Child Care Director and Staffing requirements (e.g., education, experience and certifications) must be met.
- Specific teacher to child ratios are required.
- Admission procedures and an initial enrollment agreement are required.
- Personal Rights and Parents' Rights are regulated.
- Food service regulations (snacks) are maintained.
- Provision of care and supervision (i.e., necessity of direct visual contact) is required.
- Sign-in and Sign-out Procedures are necessary.
- Minimum indoor and outdoor square footage is required for activity space.

More specific information about Community Care Licensing can be found at www.cclid.ca.gov.
